There is no better example of forward thinking in our school than registration. We have barely started the second semester, students are just settling into their new classes, and we are already gearing up for the 18-19 school year. I really love this element of the school year. It's a great time to examine what we are doing right now, determine how we could do it better, and get it planned and implemented in time for students to benefit from it in our next school year. This is when the commitment of our staff to do right by kids is on full display.

"What if we did this?"

"How about if we change that?"

"Here's what we're adding to this!"

Everyone's focus is on what we do well, what we can do better, and how we make it all come together in what ends up being a fairly short amount of time.

We often hear in the media about how, for decades now, schools simply haven't changed. To some extent, that's true. The agrarian calendar still reigns. The traditional classroom matrix still stands as the most "popular" method of delivering content. But in the war-room of schedule-building and course offerings, there is a constant commitment to evolution in curriculum and offerings that meet the needs of our ever-changing student body.

In the coming weeks, you'll be hearing about and seeing materials regarding registration for next year. Please take time to talk with your students about these materials. We have an incredible menu of opportunities that offer students tastes, or even big bites, of numerous career pathways. Ask them why they are thinking about the courses they've selected. Ask them why they didn't select other courses? That dialogue will help students cement their choices, and begin them thinking about what lies ahead, next year, and well beyond.

Thanks for all you do in this partnership we share of educating your sons and daughters. Have a great February.

Joel Leer
Principal

News from the Counseling Office:

On Tuesday, February 27, all 11th grade students will take the ACT with writing (for free!) during the school day. There is nothing students and families need to do in advance in order to register for this test date. As part of the pre-registration session students will complete during their chemistry classes, they will have the opportunity to send their ACT scores to up to four colleges free of charge. Students are encouraged to take advantage of these four free score reports. Sending them after the fact will cost $13 per college, and even if future scores end up higher than this particular score, colleges will not penalize students.

For students who wish to study and prepare for the ACT, there are many resources out there, and the following two are great places to start without investing extra money:

1. Naviance Test Prep is located within each student's Naviance account. This is the same online ACT test prep package that ACT offers (at a cost) through their website. If students have questions about logging in to Naviance or about Naviance Test Prep, they can contact their counselor.
2. ACT offers some free test prep resources through their website: <http://www.act.org/content/act/en/products-and-services/the-act/test-preparation.html>
